An extensive forest fire prevailed between Bedford and Burlington, Mass., about noon, Wednesday, and before midnight the aky was apparently one mass of flames, and the safety of the farm bouses. Many hard worked farmers turned out and fought the enemy till morning when, seeing that he would not be stayed as long as anything could be reached of a combustible nature, they were obliged to retire from exhaustion. The scene from a distance was grand, beyond the expression of language. At times one sheet of flame extended for miles, then calming down to the horizon line. The flames, reaching mamouth pines, would about up to the clouds as if vying with each other in their awful work of midnight destruction. One group of bystanders could at times catch glimpses of similar groups on distant hills, and not a few were led to think of the predicted day when the final operation of the colours of the predicted day when the final purifying of things terrestrial is to take place. This tremendous destruction cannot be estimated in dollars and cents. It must have reached many thousands before it was finally put out.

and is still doing. There is no question but those farmers who have been pursuing this line of work persistently and intelligently, outlook for the future is quite as good. Mr. Libby can do no better work for the farmers of the State than to stir them up to the importance of this line of business. Thus far, until quite recently, there has been no effort in this State to manufacture any of the fancy brands of cheese which are made in such variety in other countries, and are found in our markets only as they are imported. Mr. Charles Sabourin of Lewiston owns a fine farm at South Lewiston, and recently has started in to make some of the foreign brands of cheese. He has an expert cheese maker in his employ, Mr. H. Pessant, who understands the pro-cesses of making a large number of different kinds. At present he is making what is known as Camembert cream cheese, and placed the first lot on the market a few days ago. It is said to be a fine article.
